SOMEWHERE IN AUSTRALIA

BY A YANK
The following poems were sent by Pfc Samuel Greco of Tinley now in Australia.

Somewhere in Australia the sun is like a curse.
And each long day is followed by another slightly worse.

Where the brick red dust flows thicker than the shifting desert sand
And white men dream and wish for the greener fairer land.

Somewhere in Australia where a woman is never seen.
Where the sky is never cloudy and the grass is never green.

Where the Dingos nightly howling robs a man of blessed sleep.
Where there isn't any whiskey and the beer is never cheap.

Somewhere in Australia where the nights were made for love.
Where the moon is like a searchlight and the southern cross above,
Sparkles like a diamond nicker in a balmy tropic night.
It's a shameless waste of beauty where there's not a girl in sight.

Somewhere in Australia where the mail is always late,
And a Christmas card in April is considered up to date.
Where we never have a payday and never have a cent,
But we never miss the money cause we never get it spent.

Somewhere in Australia where the ants and lizzards play,
And a hundred fresh mosquitos replace each you slay.
Take me back to Frisco, let me hear those mission bells
For this God Forsaken outpost is a substitute for HELL.
An Answer to the poem, written by An Australian Girl.

Somewhere in Australia where the Yankee's are a curse
(If I wasn't such a lady I could think of something worse)
Where the Yankees hide is thicker than the brick dust they curse,
And the baseball players howling wake the rooster in the dawn.

Somewhere in Australia where a woman is never seen,
With a Yank like you...what a mug you are old bean.
Where the din of canned music robs a girl of blessed sleep
And she wakes at early morning to the snorting of a jeep.

Somewhere in Australia where the mail is always late,
Where you never get your sack on time, cause the Yankees musn't wait.

Where the picture shows are crowded out with Yankee's pleasure bent.
Who think the world was made for them, their dollars and their cents.

Somewhere in Australia where in the air raid siren scream,
Where the Aussie girls are getting thin for the lack of their ice cream
Where you can't buy any chocolate since the Yankee's horde has come
And you can't walk down the foot path without commanding gun.

Somewhere in Australia where's a Yank whose name is mud,
And we'll never rest twixt heaven and earth until we have his blood.
Oh take him back to Frisco let him hear that Mission Bell.
For despite the war and Tojo we can manage just as well.

Editor-In-Chief On Enforced Vacation

Editor Wm. Semmler has been a patient in Silver Cross hospital this week. He was taken violently ill Monday afternoon as he and Mrs. Semmler were driving home from Joliet. Tuesday morning Dr. W. V. Hedges took him to the hospital for treatment and for X-rays. He thinks he can come home this afternoon, but circumstances may not permit that, as far as we know now, Thursday.

And in the meantime, his gang at home and in the shop are carrying on, getting the papers out and struggling with headlines and what not. So if you do not think we have gotten out a good paper this week, don't let us know it, for we think we are doing quite well, but will be glad when our boss is back on the job again.

EMERGENCY FARM HELP

PROGRAM FOR WILL COUNTY

August Maue, acting superintendent of Will County schools submitted the following report on the victory program for emergency farm help.

"Increase of production demands increased labor. Rural school boys are willing to do extra work to aid in the production so essential for victory. We are recommending the following conditions which should be considered with care before the request for excuse be turned in: (1) No one is to be excused during any forenoon: (2) The EMERGENCY FARM HELP EXCUSE is to be filled out at once, indicating as nearly as possible, the dates of absence: (3) No excuse is to be granted within five days preceding an examination: (4) The boy is to be counted present for perfect attendance: (5) School work is to be "made up" in a manner satisfactory to the teachers.

Parents, pupils and teachers will have increased burdens. We feel that all will respond, as the need for increased production is very urgent. Emergency Farm Help Excuses are available at the office of the County superintendent."

These excuses must be signed by the parent or guardian and must be approved by three directors.

Washington, D. C. ENDING ABSENTEEISM

Undersecretary of War Patterson's labor advisers have a one-point program for ending absenteeism in war plants. Here is the one point: Communities should adjust themselves to the hours of the factories. Stores, banks, doctors, lawyers, plus other services should be available not merely for one shift of workers but for all shifts.

At present workers on the swing shift, beginning at midnight, find themselves out of gear with the life of the community. The greatest absenteeism is among workers on the odd shifts, and can be attributed not to indifference to winning the war but to the inconvenience of trying to live and buy food and get Johnny to the doctor, while the swing shift turns night into day.

Absenteeism is higher among women than men, which may mean nothing more than trouble with the ration board. A woman will take a day off from the factory because she has to register for canned foods, or because a child is sick in the family, or because she hasn't had time to buy a new dress at the store.

Remedy for this is nothing less than two or three shifts on the part of the services that serve the workers. The ration board, it is suggested, should come to the factory.

In many cases, war department advisers say, absenteeism is caused not by loafing but by overwork. In certain machine-tool areas, such as New England, men have been working 50 and 56 hours a week for years. They are simply exhausted. Incidentally, this factor is the principal cause of absenteeism in Germany, where workers are worn down by unremitting labor and long hours.

Note: There is little sympathy in Undersecretary Patterson's office for the Rickenbacker crusade against labor. It is regarded as useless and unsound to try to appeal to workers over their leaders.

NO RUSSIAN HURRAHS

American observers in Russia report that the public is not throwing its red cap in the air over current military successes. The reaction is not much different, in fact, from the reaction to losses.

"The mood of the Russian people," says one report, "hasn't changed much since last summer when they were being driven back to the Volga. Nor has it changed much from the years of peace."

It is explained that Russians have become accustomed to tumult and personal danger. For 25 years they have lived in an atmosphere of revolution, purges, and starvation. War has brought no sudden shock to them as to us.

Even in the face of the terrific losses Russia has suffered in this war, the losses forced upon Russia by her own government ten years ago remain almost unsurpassed. When the Soviet government was imposing on the people, the unwelcome system of collective farming, farmers were denied seed for planting, and a vast number of people, estimated between two and five million, starved to death.

The Russians are stolid, taking defeat or victory in their stride.

SPANISH DAGGER AT U. S. BACK

Here is the lowdown on the visit of Franco's special representative, ex-Spanish Foreign Minister Beigbeder, to this country.

Franco's regular representative, Ambassador Juan Cardenas, has been sending him what he wanted to hear, rather than the truth about the way the American people have put their hearts into the war. Cardenas has emphasized the clash of personalities and inefficiency of war production which get into the headlines but is not the general rule.

When U. S. officials learned of this, they conceived the idea of bringing a special Franco envoy to the U. S. A. to get the real picture. Actually it was the war department, not the state department, which hatched the inspiration and which is taking him on a tour of war plants and army posts to drink in the real spirit of the war effort.

Note: Many high-up officials here believe Franco is an opportunist who, regardless of pledges, will jump whichever way he sees the war is going in the spring. He could, if he wished, plunge a dagger into the back of U. S. forces in North Africa. Beigbeder has a background of friendship for the United States.

CAPITAL CHAFF

It is said of Woodrow Wilson that he was a professor surrounded by politicians, and that FDR is a politician surrounded by professors. It is said of Madame Chiang Kai-shek's huge reception that it out-caviared the Baruch party for Mrs. Harry Hopkins.

Captain Eddie Rickenbacker is making it clear to friends that he has no presidential ambitions despite the fact that Gerald K. Smith is hurrahing for him. Incidentally most people don't know it, but Rickenbacker saw the hand-writing on the wall as far as isolation is concerned and resigned from the America First committee on January 16, 1941, nearly one year before Pearl Harbor.

Here, with the nose of the glider hinged open, and a crew of four men raising the tail so that the nose will contact the ground, the jeep is driven into the fuselage for the flight.

They were tested off the Florida keys.

Sanitation Aid to Cutting Hog Losses

Farmers Urged to Guard Sows in '43

Unfortunately there can be no rationing restrictions of disease germs, so it is up to the farmers to guard their sows from unsanitary conditions that lead to heavy losses from mange, swine erysipelas, hog cholera, worms and swine pox.

According to specimens received at the laboratory of animal pathology and hygiene at the University of Illinois college of agriculture, swine pox is causing some losses in this state. While not usually a serious disease in itself, it leads to other diseases and can be a complicating factor.

Occurrence of swine pox to any appreciable extent in the herd might be taken as a warning signal that all is not well, since it occurs under conditions favoring or fostering other infectious and parasitic diseases. Hog cholera virus should not be used as an immunizing agent in herds showing extensive pox. It is commonly spread from pig to pig by the hog louse. Widespread pox usually goes hand in hand with a relatively heavy louse infection.

Wormy pigs waste feed, gain weight slowly, have damaged lungs, become unthrifty and die. Many become susceptible to other diseases.

Farrowing quarters should be cleaned regularly by scrubbing with boiling lye water and then spraying with cresol. Sows should be washed before being placed in the farrowing pen. Pigs and sows should be hauled to pasture or driven over ground from which pigs have been absent for a year. Raising pigs on clean pasture is the most satisfactory method.

Mange is caused by a microscopic mite that burrows into the skin, causing great irritation, "elephant hide," loss of hair and unthriftiness.

Agriculture in Industry

By FLORENCE C. WEED

Poultry

There are more chickens in Iowa than any other state, while Texas ranks second in chickens and also leads the turkey population. In 1923, there were 475,000,000 chickens on American farms but since then, the number has declined.

While the great bulk of poultry is sold alive or as cold storage fowls, there are a few commercial uses for by-products. Animal feeding stuffs are taking some packing house trimmings such as legs, visceral fat and heads. Food for pet cats and dogs uses killing plant offal to some extent. When research has gone further, it may be possible to extract therapeutic products from glands of chicken heads and recover gelatine from chicken legs which would have surgical uses. Scientists believe that the available supply of 20,000 tons of feathers might be used in plastics. Goose feathers have long been marketed for pillow stuffing.

It is possible now to obtain dried whole egg, dried egg yolk and dried egg albumen. These products are imported but might be produced here. Non-food uses of eggs are getting more attention. The tanning industry may be able to utilize more low grade eggs. Manufacturers of frozen or dried egg materials have thousands of pounds of egg shells which are used only to a small extent as chicken feed and fertilizer.

Stepping Up Egg Yield

Feed your chickens a good laying ration if you want to get maximum egg production. A good laying mash is one composed of 200 pounds ground yellow corn; 100 pounds wheat bran or rice bran; 100 pounds meat scraps or shrimp meal; and 100 pounds ground oats. Where meat scraps are used in place of shrimp meal, add one pound salt to the mash mixture. One hundred laying hens will consume between 23-25 pounds of this mixture.

Make Slip Covers for That Unusual Chair

THIS cover was a twofold conservation measure in the most literal sense. Its purpose was not to cover shabby upholstery but to protect handsome damask from everyday wear and tear, in a household where there were children. The substantial striped cotton material chosen harmonizes perfectly with the rather elegant lines of the chair frame.

If you have an especially difficult chair to cover, you will save time by fitting a muslin pattern first. Then you can snip until it fits perfectly around arms and other supports and, if you make a mistake in the pattern just stitch a patch over it and start over again. Before removing the pattern from the chair, plan the openings so that they will lap neatly and be sure they are long enough. In the finished cover either bindings or facings may be used for irregular edges.

NOTE—This chair is from Mrs. Spears' Sewing Book 3, which also contains directions for smart new curtains; and numerous things to make from odds and ends, as well as new materials. To get copy of Book 3 send name and address with 15 cents in coins to:

Confirming Jap's Death

The Japanese military authorities usually announce that a soldier or sailor is dead when he is only reported as missing and his fate is unknown, because his family would "lose face" if he had allowed himself to be captured. Often the authorities also send a sealed urn of ashes to the family to "confirm" his death.

MURDER at PIRATE'S HEAD

By ISABEL WAITT
W-N-U RELEASE

THE STORY SO FAR: Judy Jason, who is telling the story, receives an anonymous letter enclosing $800 and asking her to bid for an abandoned church to be auctioned the next day. She gets the church, only to find, in an old chest, the body of a man identified as Roddy Lane. The body disappears a few hours later. A fish shed burns, apparently killing an old man named Brown, who is supposed to have lived there. The anonymous letter disappears. A golf club found near the chest is identified as Hugh Norcross'. The guests are once more assembled at the church and Hugh has just said, "Dear, I wish you'd go back to the inn."

Now continue with Judy's story.

CHAPTER XI

I felt a little squeeze on my arm, but whichever one of us he meant, Bessie did the answering. "Not without you, Hughie. You'll find I'll stand by, no matter how they lie about you. No matter what they plant on you. Tell 'em to find your blue scarf, why don't you?"

"That," shrilled Lily obliquely, "would be a darned good idea!"

"Hush," Hugh interrupted. "Blew out to sea, probably. We're going to tell Quade about the auction. He's got a bee in his bonnet it may have something to do with all these outrages."

"If you'll all go sit down somewhere—anywhere," Victor suggested. "And you're going to see the significance of this when we're through. See if you don't. I wasn't here, so why don't I play auctioneer and ask the questions? Nobody has to answer anything he doesn't choose."

Bessie Norcross stood up. My eyes had become accustomed to the dim interior, which, after the basement, seemed fairly light. "Just one minute," Bessie said. "Did you find your bag, Judy? I want my doorway; not the one you gave me last night, which sticks halfway. I'm planning on a nap after lunch and I intend to lock myself in."

I'd been sure the key I'd swiped from the artist's door really could lock Bessie's. Now, somewhat flustered, I said: "I'll get your key, Miss Norcross. Don't worry."

Albion Potter leaned forward from a pew behind where we were sitting in the church and exclaimed in my ear: "That reminds me! I haven't a key to my room, Miss Judy. If—if you could trouble your uncle to find me one, I'd appreciate it, under the circumstances."

"I'll see to it." Anyway, I could supply his. But where the dickens was my bag?

We all settled down on the edge of our pews.

"I've got some work to do on my sermon," the minister said. "Will this take long, Mr. Quade?"

"You needn't stay at all," Victor said. "I'll begin with you, then, sir. You did bid at the auction?"

"Certainly, I bid. Didn't everybody?" The Rev. Jonas De Witt had a powerful physique to match his voice. Now he stood up, a portly, middle-aged enigma, and held up his hands. I hoped he wasn't going to offer up a prayer.

"My friends, now that we are gathered together in this house of God," he began ministerially. . . .

"House of the devil would be more like it!" muttered the invalid, wheeling up closer.

De Witt paid no attention to him. "Let us help Mr. Quade all we can. I bid twice, I think." He threw back his head with a pulpist gesture, folding his hands behind him, and started to pace in front of the pews.

"And why did you want to own this tumble-down old—"

"Not tumble-down, my friend. This church will stand another hundred years. The Quakers built for service. Why? Because I was exchange pastor here one happy summer—the happiest time of my life—years ago. Before my trouble over the funds I was accused of taking, but did not take. Later, after I'd been disgraced and put out of my church, I was exonerated and reinstated. All in the records in New York City. Nothing whatever to do with this."

He sighed heavily, one huge paw grasping a dusty pew post. "One would be pretty certain to speak the truth in the house of God. Nothing can be concealed from the Almighty, who sees all, hears all, knows all."

"That's the three monkeys," tittered Lily Kendall. Lily didn't mean to be irreverent, I'm sure. She was just impatient and nervous. When you know something important to tell in the midst of murder and have to listen to a lot of extraneous stuff you nearly burst. I know, because I was bursting myself to find out who'd sent me the money and made a monkey out of me.

"I bid in for purely sentimental reasons—a memory connected with my young wife, now gone," his voice faltered and he sat down—"forever."

There it was again—purely sentimental reasons! Would Victor grab that clue and go for them? He would not. Instead he made them admit what we already knew, that they'd all wanted that church and had bid for it at the auction. But they were cagey. If any of them had come to the Head purposely to be present at the auction—the way Roddy announced he had that fatal night—they were mighty quiet about it now.

Hugh Norcross tried to buy the church for Bessie. "My sister needs something to occupy her mind," he said. "We found that the Head was still a pleasant place to come to," he went on hesitantly, one eye on his keeper. "Her nervousness was so much better, for one thing. The auction was fun, and here was a ready-made chance to get the makings of a gift shoppe cheap."

"I remember you said the old dump would make a good bonfire," Thaddeus Quincy chirped. "Didn't burn up the wrong building by mistake, did you, Norcross? Judy and I saw you scouting around last night, remember?"

"Stop it, Quincy!" Victor said sharply. Hugh had risen. "Sit down, Norcross. Perfectly understandable. You wanted to allay any fears that you were anxious to get—"

"What the devil are you insinuating?"

"Nothing. Just that you thought you'd get it cheaper—the gift shoppe for your sister—if the others didn't see you were anxious."

"That's right, Hughie. Just what you told me, remember?" Bessie backed Victor.

"I kind of hoped I could get it for a studio," the artist spoke up. "But I couldn't go above the Gerrys. Hundred and fifty, didn't they bid, Judy?"

I said I thought so.

"And you, Miss Kendall?"

"Me? Oh, uh, I didn't really want the old thing. Bid for the fun of it. Thought it would go cheap and I could watch the sunsets and play I was on a ship without getting seasick. I hate boats. But I didn't really consider buying it. Of course, if it went for a bargain—never could resist a bargain. Thought maybe my little niece, Gloria Lovelace, might like—"

"I'm afraid to go down there again by myself."

"Gloria Lovelace, the movie star!" scoffed Bessie. "What would she do with a church?"

"Mighty sweet reformers," Lily said, proudly. "New publicity angle. Remember me tellin' you I have a lovely picture of her I wanted you to see? Remind me to show it when we get back. Gloria's my favorite niece, and a sweeter, lovelier little darl—"

"I'm sure she is," Victor interrupted. "You must show us that picture by and by. But right now I want to ask you to listen carefully, please. Mr. De Witt had sentimental reasons. Potter wanted a studio. Miss Kendall, a sea place to watch sunsets. The Gerrys, a bungalow. The Norcrosses, a gift shoppe. And you, Mr. Quincy?"

"Oh, I was there—in the doorway. Called in a bid, but stopped when I saw Judy Jason was determined to get the church. Didn't want to bid down Judy."

"That was kind of you, Quincy. Was it because you knew she'd buy it, anyway, for you?"

"For me?" Mr. Q. appeared to be nonplused. "See here, Quade, why should a cripple like me want an ark like this? I can see the sunsets from the inn or the rocks."

"Explain yourself, Quade," cried several voices.

A man was entering the church. We all looked around to see Uncle Wylie, who slunk into one of the rear pews.

"Just covered it up with some good tarpaulin," he said. "Havin' a prayer meetin' or another auction?"

We all shuddered, recalling the poor, charred body under its rough cover. My aunt wanted me, I was informed, but I didn't budge.

"This isn't an auction or meeting, either," the minister said. "Mr. Quade seems to think our bidding had something to do with the mysterious bridge bombings and—the dead man down there. I believe, at last, the papers can describe everything that's happened to the diseased brain of a maniac—and it'll be the truth."

Victor shook his head. "No maniac wrote the letter to Judy. I believe the person who wrote her that strange request is back of all this. Tell them, Judy, as you recall the contents, about the mysterious letter asking you to buy the Quaker church."

"I did. I'm sure I knew it practically word for word. They made me repeat it all over again. They appeared entirely surprised."

"And sent you the money!" Lily piped. "How much, dearie?"

But before I could say anything Victor retorted: "Enough, so that she bought the church, as you all know. Had some over. Quite a sum."

"If we could see that letter—" Hugh began.

Did he know it had been destroyed, that he dared ask for it?

"Yes, the letter, though I don't see what that's got to do with killin' Roddy Lane. You keep the rest of that kale, honey," Lily ordered, catching her long string of tiny mixed beads on Albion Potter's coat button as she leaned across him and breaking it, as usual, in the undoing.

"She's going to," Victor cut in quickly. "Put it away with the letter, didn't you, Judy? The police will want to examine both of them."

Victor was pretending the mysterious letter was still safely concealed in my bureau drawer. He didn't want them to know I'd discovered it was gone. But the person who'd taken it would know. I had to say something.

"Near together," I said. "I—I put the money in my stocking at first, but after what's happened I wish—oh, I wish I could give it back. If one of you wanted me to do you the favor of buying the church, for goodness' sake say so. Come out and admit it, so we won't connect it up with all these horrors."

Nobody stirred. After a moment, Uncle Wylie asked in a strangled voice, "Judy, does Nella know about this?"

"No," I answered. "But she's dying to find out. She couldn't understand how I had $300 to plunk down at an auction when she had to advance me my fare to the Head, and I don't blame her. I wanted to tell her, only the letter impressed silence upon me."

"So you put the money—with the letter?"

"Well, it's in the other—" I stopped. He couldn't want me to tell them exactly where it was, of course. Just to hint to the thief who'd swiped the letter that he'd overlooked the money, and that I'd overlooked his taking the letter.

"Wherever you mean," Victor added pointedly, "I hope it's in a safe place. If the police can identify those bills it will help."

Lily whispered: "Tell him, Judy, and the police won't never see 'em. I think he sent the letter himself. So there!"

Uncle Wylie hurried out of the door, without a word to anybody. The rest of us were all talking at once. They asked me so many questions I was afraid I'd mix up Victor's plans and I did so desperately want to help him.

He saw the position I was in and drew me aside as the group broke up and started outdoors again.

"Any place I could watch your bedroom door, Judy?"

"There's the storeroom."

"Fat chance, anyway. Don't think he'll fall for the trap. Those bills weren't from all over the United States by chance and without sequence."

"Another thing. Lily Kendall did bid a lot. She was in almost at the finish. She's got it in for—" But I didn't have a chance to tell him what she'd hinted about the Pirate's Mouth just then, for the minister boomed, linking his arm with Victor's and dragging him out of the church: "Well, back I go to the inn. Got to get that sermon done some time. And after the police come—"

I pounced on Victor as he disengaged himself. "Please, Mr. Quade, I've got to find my bag. That confounded key is in it."

"Well, I'll be trotting along after the others," De Witt said.

"Where did you leave it?" Victor sounded impatient. "I think it's important, just now, to see who makes a dive for your room. I'd hoped—that storeroom—"

"But it's in the basement. Only take a minute. I'm—I'm afraid to go down there again by myself."

"Oh, all right. Only let's hurry. You're sure you left it there?"

I was sure. But I was extremely doubtful if it was there now. I told Victor how I'd left it near the chest when I tried to fiddle open the lock.

He told me to stay on the stair and let him hunt around. Certainly the bag wasn't in sight. He opened the chest, looked behind it, and then into a rickety closet, where a few old hymn books were piled on some shelves. Nothing doing.

I knew he was impatient about the old key, and so was I. "Never mind. It'll turn up."

"How does it happen the $500 wasn't in it if you left it right after the auction?" he asked.

"Because I took it out after the sale. Right down here, too. Put it in my—my hose. I never make a practice," I said with some hauteur, "of carrying large sums in my handbag. A snagak thief—good heavens! What was that?"

OUR LORD'S INTERCESSORY PRAYER

LESSON TEXT—John 17:1-8, 18-26.

GOLDEN TEXT—"Holy Father, keep through thine own name those whom thou hast given me, that they may be one, as we are."—John 17:11.

There are some times and places so sacred that one is instinctively hushed into reverent devotion. When Christ prayed in holy intercession (as recorded in John 17) on the night before His suffering His disciples must have been lifted into the very presence of the Eternal One. It was a holy experience.

He prayed for Himself, but even more did He pray for His believing followers. To know that someone is praying for us is indeed an anchor in a time of storm, a strong help in the hour of conflict or of service for Christ.

But to know that the Master prayed for you and me—that is enough to send us, like the disciples of old, out to face an unbelieving world in His conquering name. He prayed for Himself—and He prayed for me!

I. He Prayed for Himself (vv. 1-8). He looked up and said: "Father," and then He was ready to pray. So close was He to God that there was just this simple recognition of their communion. In Christ are we not as close as He?

What did Jesus ask for Himself? At first thought it seems a little unusual that He asked

1. For Recognition of His Divine Glory (vv. 1-5).

Why would He who had just given the disciples an example of and an admonition to humility desire to have His glory manifested? Be sure it was not a matter of selfish pride. He had finished His work (for He counted redemption as complete throughout His prayer), and now the glory which He laid down when He came to earth (Phil. 2:6-8) was to be resumed.

He wants man to see Him now not only as the compassionate Son of man, but the glorious Son of God, able to save. It is right that the glory of Christ should be magnified and recognized by the whole creation. He is worthy!

2. For the Manifestation of His Grace (vv. 6-8).

The Father had given Christ the heart devotion of those who believed in Him. Note that their faith rested on the name of God (v. 6), and upon His Word which had come to them and to us through Christ.

He recognized their position and standing in Him and established it before God and man. He then prayed for them (read vv. 9-17) that they might be kept in an evil world as a testimony to the grace and power of God in the human heart.

This leads to His intercession for all believers.

II. He Prayed for All Believers (vv. 18-26).

Christians are not simply the avowed adherents to a particular form of belief, they are "sent" ones. As the Father sent Him into the world, "even so send I them into the world," said Christ.

Christ has gone to be with the Father, but He has left those who believe in Him as His witnesses, His representatives. For this they need holiness. He prayed:

1. For Their Consecration (vv. 18, 19).

For their sakes He consecrated Himself. Surely if He needed it, we do far more. It is not only His will for us, but His prayer. How wonderfully that prayer was answered we see as we look back over the intervening 19 centuries, from His immediate disciples on through the martyrs, the missionary pioneers of all ages, the faithful preachers and teachers of the gospel, yes and "livers" of the gospel too. He knew, He prayed, God answered. Are you in that blessed host of consecrated believers?

2. For Their Unity and Glory (vv. 20-26).

There is a refreshing simplicity about the Christian faith which is utterly different from all the complications which man has prepared and superimposed upon it. Essentially it is a matter of God having sent His Son into the world to be the Redeemer of men. He and the Father are one, He and His followers are one, and so we are all one. We who today believe are included (read vv. 20-23).

This is an inward unity of the Spirit, not an outward union of organizations. The answer to our difficulty is not the dissolution of denominations (although there do seem to be far too many subdivisions, too), but the uniting of all groups in a oneness of love and devotion to Christ, and a united emphasis on the gospel.

There is something more here. This unity puts Christ's followers into the place where His glory may be revealed in and upon them. It is His prayer that we should behold in our Saviour the glory which God had given Him because He loved Him before the foundation of the world.

Sam Was Entirely for Peace and Harmony

It was the weekly meeting of the colored "Sons of I Will Arise Society." At the end of the usual business, a loud voice yelled from the back of the hall: "Mistah Chayman, Ah makes a motion dat Sam Jackson am a low-down, sneaking mis'rable chicken thief."

Down in the front a little fellow leaped to his feet.

"Who makes dat motion dat Ah'm a low-down, sneaking mis'rable chicken thief?" he cried, glaring round the room.

A huge, scar faced Negro jumped up.

"Ah makes da motion," he said, menacingly.

"Mister Chayman," said Sam, quickly, "Ah seconds dat motion."

"Why I look only half my age"

Pardon me for bragging, but I do look as young and can do as good work as a brand new electric iron:

Of course, all the credit goes to my owner for giving me special wartime care.

She knows that the materials ordinarily used to make electric irons are now needed for war production, so she's making sure that I keep in good condition for the duration.

I think it's a swell idea, and suggest that you give your electric iron this care, too. Each time, after using the iron and it has cooled off, wipe the sole plate with a damp cloth. If necessary, use soap suds or mild scouring powder, but don't immerse the iron in water. Every month, rub the sole plate with paraffin or beeswax.

If your iron has a detachable cord, always plug the cord into the iron before plugging it into the wall outlet.

When you've finished ironing, remove the plug from the outlet first, then from the iron. Never pull on the cord.

And remember, don't let the cord touch the hot iron or rub on the edge of the ironing board. Either may wear off the insulation.

Most cases of damaged irons are caused by dropping them.

So make sure your ironing table is steady. Always rest the iron on the heel rest, the stand or the insulating pad.

Another way to save wear and tear on your iron is to avoid running over buttons, beads and other hard objects which may injure the sole plate.

What if something does go wrong?

If your iron shows signs of overheating, have it inspected by a service man right away.

If the iron fails to operate, before deciding that it is out of order, make sure the plug is in, the appliance switch is on, and the outlet is "alive".

This little check-up may save you money and spare you some anxious moments.

Dear Mr. Semmler:

I have been intending to write a thank you for the paper, but they have been keeping us so busy I just haven't had time.

We aren't supposed to give out information for publication on what we are doing here or how many of us there are here. So all I can say is we have a full day.

As long as I can't tell you what we are doing here I will close by thanking you again for the paper, it is indeed a great help to a fellows morale to get the news from home.

Yours respectfully,

Mrs. H. Kruspe.

Dear Friend:

I will take this opportunity to thank you for the fine Christmas gift I received. We boys sure do get a thrill and a treat. I don't think there is anything that can beat the "goodies from home."

I am very sorry to say, that I can not give you any details about this particular theatre of operations, but I assure you that I am well taken care of and never felt better in my life.

Just one more before I sign off: "The spirit of the American people is invincible."

Most sincerely yours,

March 5, 1943

Dear Mrs. Kruspe and Legion Aux.

I certainly do appreciate the wonderful gift you folks have sent me. I don't know what it would be like in the Army if it wasn't for you folks back home. I know the rest of the boys feel as I do, a little odd perhaps always receiving and not being able to repay your numerous favors, but perhaps some day later on we'll be able to show how much your kindness really meant to us. Without the people back home I'm sure the Army would never be the same. It sure keeps up the old morale and I can say that for every fellow here.

This post is in quite a desolate spot, but we still manage to have our share of fun. You folks have your troubles with snow and cold, while we have to contend with daily dust storms, but other than that every thing is swell and they sure feed us good. I seem to be gaining weight every day, better stop pretty soon or you won't know me. I'm still working in the Post Operation office and really like the job a lot, time sure flies when your busy and they manage to keep us busy. In closing I wish to thank you again for the swell gift and hope you folks are all in the best of health.

As ever,

Don Cleveland

Mokena Bowling News

The Mokena Oilers really put the damper on the Paperhangers Monday night as they downed them for three games and ended the Paperhangers winning streak at seven games.

Chief Oiler Burkhardt had the oil can with him to oil up Busehels' and Marschke's bowling balls but apparently took his team to one side and oiled up their joints as they rolled out a 2440 team series for the night. Burkhardt's 550 series, Rauck's 215 high game and Egerton's 199 high game were the main factors in the powerhouse offensive.

The Smokes took two games from the Bankers and still have a chance to overhaul the Robins for first place, although they are five games behind with three nights to go. Wes Cappel finally snapped out of a slump with a 211 game and a 506 series for the night.

The V-Eights extended their losing streak to eight straight games as they succumbed to the high flying robins for three games. The remark that George Rinke made last week that the V-Eighters have burned out a bearing while dropping three games to his team appears to be so. L. Warning of the Robins lead this team with a 590 series and took honors for the night.

It looked like ladies night as the rooting sections were jammed and all were cheering lustily for their favorite teams. The bedlam of yelling, funmaking and noise carried on throughout to the end and appeared to be a gala night for everyone.

Next week we like to have more join us in the merriment as an addition we may see the crowning of the champions for the season if Robinson's Tavern is capable of taking three games from Braun's Recreation next Monday night. Also featured will be the battle between the Paperhangers and the Bankers for the cellar position. The V-Eighters and Mokena Oilers for third place that is if the V-Eighters can sneak that oil can from Burkhardt and oil up their bearings.

GRANTLAND
RICE

YOU would think, at the rather ripe age of 81, that a fellow would be looking backward through his memories of big days and great years.

But Colonel Matt Winn insists on looking forward. We tried to get him to tell us about that first Kentucky Derby in 1875, just 68 years ago, when the Colonel was a kid of 13.

"You must have gotten a big thrill from watching Aristides win that first Derby," I said. "Or can you remember about it?"

"I can remember everything about it," the Colonel said. "Sixty-eight years back isn't so long ago. That was a good Derby. But wait till you see our 1943 special. That will be the one."

"How is the walking between New York and Louisville?" I asked him. "Very good," Colonel Winn said. "I might add—excellent. You ought to leave about three weeks ahead, allowing for 30 miles a day. Maybe a little longer. But you will find good roads. You will see a beautiful countryside. You can look at flares of dogwood blooms and hear birds singing in the April maples. You can also take along a form sheet. You can read about Count Fleet, Occupation, Ocean Wave and possibly some 18 starters."

"Thirty miles a day," I whispered. "I can already hear my old dogs barking after two days. Did you ever read Masfield 'On Growing Old'?" I asked.

"Who has to grow old?" the Colonel growled. "What did he say about it?"

"Stay with me, beauty, while the fire is dying. My dogs and I are now too old for roving."

Getting There

"Did you know," Colonel Winn continued, "that racing lovers in England and Scotland have frequently started three weeks ahead to see the English Derby? And they walked all the way, hundreds of miles. Of course, this wouldn't apply to anyone needed in any form of war work. We intend to see that no oil or rubber will be used. But there will be many Kentuckians who will either walk to the track or come by wagons, buggies and street cars."

"I can tell you, honestly, that I am not thinking in terms of attendance or receipts. The thought of losing money doesn't bother me a bit. Anyone can get discouraged and quit. But we need all the color we can get today, some outside interests for thousands of people to think about in odd moments."

"The Kentucky Derby is something more than a two-minute race. It begins building up interest weeks ahead—interest among hundreds of thousands who have no chance to be at Churchill Downs in May. Count Fleet? Ocean Wave? Many others."

No Novice Speaks

"I have been looking at Kentucky Derbies for exactly 68 years. There have been a lot of yesterdays packed in since 1875, when both baseball and football were young games."

"Suppose everybody not directly connected with the winning war effort had quit and called everything off? Suppose we had no racing—no football—no baseball—no form of competitive sport left? Would that help the morale of 135,000,000 people, including 11,000,000 servicemen? That would mean we would stand as about the only nation in the world to be so badly flattened out. Fifty thousand at a football game in Moscow, with the Germans 30 miles away—from 20,000 to 30,000 watching British soccer football only a few days ago at many parks—Australia, Japan, Germany, keeping certain games going—but the greatest sporting nation of all time folding up in the way of sport?"

"No sane person would ever advocate any sport that interfered in any way with the matter of winning this war. Even a half-wit knows this."

"But, I say, at the age of 81, who should know what sport means to the United States, that sport, correctly controlled and directed, can be a helpful factor without asking any favors."

"If I knew we were going to lose $100,000 on this next Derby I would still be in favor of holding the race. Please believe me."

Colonel, we do.

PEAKING
SPORTS
by Bob McShane

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

MIDWEST sports writers ran completely out of adjectives recently when the University of Illinois basketball team rearranged Western conference records to their own liking.

The "Whiz Kids" from Illinois left little doubt that they comprise the greatest basketball aggregation not only in the extremely basketball-conscious Midwest but possibly in the nation.

Keepers of Big Ten conference records were kept busy for days cutting new stencils for the books. Every important scoring mark complied since the Western conference began official play in 1906 was boosted to new all-time heights by the more than terrific Illini and their amazing forward, Andy Phillip.

New Targets

When Illinois beat Chicago 92 to 25 in their final conference game, they blasted 11 records, sweeping the platter clean and establishing a set of standards which probably will defy conference cagers for a long time to come. Phillip, who already had smashed numerous records, added five more.

The performance of the Illini is all the more remarkable because they tore up basketball records in a season limited to 12 games because of wartime transportation restrictions. Many of the marks Phillip and the team broke in their 12 games had been made last season over a 15-game campaign.

Phillip's new records: He scored 40 points on 16 goals and eight free throws for a 12-game total of 255. Former high was Chuck Carney's collection of 188 for Illinois in 1920. For the 15-game schedule, the record was 242, set by Johnny Kotz of Wisconsin in 1942.

His 16 goals against Chicago topped the previous high of 13 in a single game.

His 40 points erased Bill Hapac's 34-point record in a single conference game, set in 1940 against Minnesota.

Two-Year Total

He broke Illinois' three-year record, set in 1920-21-22 by Carney, 396 points. Phillip compiled a two-year total of 414.

In 12 games Phillip broke Kotz's field goal record for a 15-game schedule. The Wisconsin star had 35 last year and Phillip boosted his total to 111.

Against Chicago Andy made more field goals than any other player ever made before in the Big Ten. He made 16 and eight free throws. Only five men had ever been able to make as many as 13 baskets before.

Team records were: The "Whiz Kids" broke their own record for field goals in a single game, 38 against Northwestern, by plumping in 41 against Chicago's Maroons.

The Illini total of 755 points for a season topped the old mark of 721 established by Iowa last year in 15 games.

The 92 points against Chicago was six better than the mark set a few days previously against Northwestern.

Illinois' 325 field goals for a season shattered Indiana's 288 mark set last year in 15 games.

Bottleneck

In fact, of the long list of scoring records, both team and individual, the only one that Illinois failed to crack in 1943 is the one which reads: Most points one game—two teams. And the only reason they failed to crack that was the fact that their opponents weren't able to co-operate.

As it was, they missed tying it only by two points in their 86-44 rout of Northwestern when the total score read 130. The record is 132.

Just to make it unanimous, the final game saw the Maroons from Chicago drop their 39th consecutive conference game, a mark they have been shattering every time they played a game.

In that particular game, Phillip had 20 points at half time when the Illini led, 40 to 17. Seven minutes of the game remained when he shattered the individual single game scoring record.

ON THE HOME FRONT

A man who lost his job soon after war began went to see a friend who had obtained a post in a much-criticized department. His friend was sympathetic and said: "I think I can fix you up with a job here."

The job seeker was taken along the corridor and installed in a comfortable office. His friend left him with these words: "Now, don't be surprised at our way of doing things. You'll soon get used to it."

The man settled down in his office, read his newspaper from cover to cover, and solved the crossword. Then it was time to knock off. The same thing happened every succeeding day.

During the second week he met his friend, who asked him how he liked the job.

"Fine," he replied. "The office is cozy and warm. I'm quite comfortable, but I don't think they trust me here. Every time I set foot outside the office I'm followed by two young men. They even shadow me when I go to lunch. Am I under suspicion?"

"Not at all," replied his friend. "Those fellows are your secretaries!"

KNOWS OWN MIND

Father—Betty, what are the intentions of that young man you are permitting to call on you so often? Betty—Never mind that, Dad. I know what my intentions are.

Chip Off Hard Block

With a big struggle, the farmer had sent his son to college. At the end of the first year the lad brought back his report. He stood second in his class.

"Second?" said the father coldly. "Why weren't you first? What do you think I'm sending you to college for?"

So at the end of his second year he proudly displayed his report.

"First this time, dad!" he exclaimed.

The farmer looked at the report in silence for a few moments; then he shrugged his shoulders.

"Huh!" he said curtly. "At the head of the class, eh? Can't be much of a college!"

Knows the Answers

Peter was visiting his aunt in the country, and this relative was strict with him.

One thing upon which she insisted was the observance of Sunday as not a day for play. So when she found Peter sailing his toy boat in the bath on Sunday afternoon she was grieved.

"Don't you know, Peter," she said, reproachfully, "that it's very wicked to sail your boat on Sunday?"

"Oh, but aunt," explained Peter, anxiously, "it's not a pleasure trip. It's a missionary boat going to Africa."

Leaf Falls

Abbott—Costello, where did you get that bump on your head?

Costello—My wife hit me on the head with a maple leaf.

Abbott—That's ridiculous. Where did she get a maple leaf in the winter time?

Costello—From the middle of the dining room table.

GOOD LOOKS

"How do you like my new fur coat, Hubby?"

"Well, if it's as expensive as it looks, I'll be sorry you looked at it."

On Her Mark

A woman was about to be married to her fourth husband. Her friends were astonished and asked her why she would marry four men in her not-too-long career. She said: "My first husband was a banker, my second was an actor, my third was a preacher, and my fourth is an undertaker."

When she was asked why she was marrying an undertaker, she said: "One for the money, two for the show, three to get ready, and four to go."

"The British correspondents in the U. S.," wires H. Hutchinson, chairman of their committee, "regret that you should have given publicity to the draft-dodging slur implied by your comment in the column. I am sure you were not aware of the fact that nearly every British correspondent now here either came after the war began or has been home since and that all came here with authorization of appropriate military authorities. All gave pledges to return whenever called. I hope you will set the record straight for the benefit of readers and British newsmen here."

Liberalism is an ideal which goes under various labels. Sometimes liberals call themselves Progressives, sometimes Democrats, sometimes Republicans, sometimes Populists. It does not matter. The label is nothing—the point of view is everything. But however we describe a liberal we generally recognize him by his deeds or words. A man's fundamental, long-range attitude towards life and the world fixes him permanently in the esteem and opinion of his fellow-men."

"No," corrected Miss Thomas, "my daddy makes the pictures. Your daddy only works in them."

Converting Our Industry

The groundwork for the conversion of American industry to war production started as long ago as 1922 when the Army and Navy Munitions board was set up, and the army established ordnance offices in 13 important cities throughout the country, says Collier's. The board then began a survey of some 20,000 large industrial plants to determine what these companies could and would produce in case of war.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT

Akron, Ohio had its beginning as the WORLD'S RUBBER MANUFACTURING CAPITAL in 1870 when its first rubber plant was started by Dr. B. F. Goodrich. The switching of Dakar, French West Africa, to the side of the United Nations meant the establishment for the Allies of an important port for the shipment of crude rubber, among other important war essentials. Atchafalaya, the chemist's answer to the war time shortage of quinine, is serving to stop up the collection of rubber in the malaria-infested jungles of Brazil. Here is a case of a synthetic product being used to stimulate the gathering of a natural product that is rapidly being replaced by synthetics in the United States.

Ordinary tires are now cured in molds at factories in 40 to 50 minutes. Before organic accelerators were developed by B. F. Goodrich it took about five hours to vulcanize a tire.

Sentinels of Health

Don't Neglect Them!

Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—life itself—is constantly producing waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to endure. When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel tired, nervous, all worn out. Frequent, scanty or burning passages are sometimes further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbance. The recognized and proper treatment is a diuretic medicine to help the kidneys get rid of excess poisonous body waste. Use Doan's Pills. They have had more than forty years of public approval. Are endorsed the country over. Insist on Doan's. Sold at all drug stores.

DOAN'S PILLS

DEHYDRATION

Dehydration, drying, one of the oldest known methods of food preservation, may return to favor with thousands of war time housewives this summer as a result of experiments just completed by the Public Service Company of Northern Ill.

Working at the Company's gas headquarters, engineers and home service economists have successfully dehydrated a dozen varieties of fruits and vegetables in the oven of an ordinary gas range, of which there are more than a million now in service in the kitchens of Chicago and northern Illinois.

With food shortages becoming more critical and prospects of more and more items being added to the ration list, city and suburban dwellers who have been harvesting their vegetables for a generation with a can opener, will soon be turning to the spade, digging up back yards, vacant lots, and park plots to plant Victory gardens.

The successful Victory gardeners will not only obtain fresh vegetables to balance their diets this summer, but thousands will have a surplus to preserve for next winter's use. It's for this group that the Public Service experts have been doing their gas oven research, now completed after months of painstaking experiment.

With canning equipment on the scarce list, they believe they have the answer to this year's problem of food preservation for any housewife who has an ordinary gas range in her kitchen, as the process they have developed uses no critical materials. The only thing needed, assuming you have the gas range oven to begin with, is a wood frame with some ordinary cotton curtain netting stretched over it. This home made tray which holds the vegetables to be dehydrated can be placed on top of the regular metal rack already in the oven and you're all set to start dehydrating operations right in your own kitchen.

Here's all you have to do: (The process varies somewhat, depending on the kind of vegetable).

1. Steam briefly the vegetables to be dehydrated, using a tightly covered container and suspending the vegetables above rapidly boiling water. (Steaming prevents enzymes from altering color, flavor or texture of the food.)

2. After steaming remove the thin film of skin from the vegetables. (It will come off by just rubbing your fingers over it.)

3. Cut the vegetables into thin slices. (This hastens the drying process.)

(Items 2 and 3 would apply only to carrots, beets, and similar roots, not to beans, leafy, green vegetables etc.)

4. Place the slices on the home made tray and put in the gas oven.

5. Light the oven, leaving the oven door open eight inches (this permits air circulation necessary for proper dehydration) and bring the oven temperature to 150 degrees F. no more. The vegetables will be completely and properly dehydrated in from 4 1/2 to 6 hours, if one tray is used, from 6 to 8 hours if two trays are used. (Some vegetables take longer than others. Onions take 4 1-2 hours for one tray, 5 1-2 hours for two trays; beans and beets 5 hours for one tray, 8 hours for two trays, peas, apples, and carrots 5 1/2 hours for one tray, 7 hours for two trays, and spinach 6 hours for one tray, 8 hours for two trays.)

After dehydration is completed, put the vegetables (now 1-4 to 1-9 their original size) in an air tight container and store away for future use. (A glass jar or sealed paraffin paper bag will do. Public Service has found that the sealed paraffin paper bag is practical as the food can be stored in bags according to size of meal servings desired. The bags then can be placed in a tight pop corn can or other container which should be kept in a cool, dark, dry place.)

7. To eat next winter, remove dehydrated food from container and soak in minimum of water until shape and size are restored. (This takes about three hours.) Then cook as desired, using same water in which vegetable was soaked. Cooking time is cut in half because of original steaming. Leafy, green vegetables need not be soaked but may be cooked immediately in small amount of water.

What about the cost? The average time for dehydrating is about six hours. At a 150 degree temperature, a six hour dehydration job will cost the average householder about six cents, or less than one cent per lb. of vegetables. Vegetables dehydrated by the process appear to retain food values comparable with other methods of preservation. And the taste? "Just like fresh vegetables", say the researchers who have been eating the products of their own experiments.

The company is planning to issue booklets and other material detailing the dehydration process and to hold educational demonstrations for housewives so that they will be experienced in this oldest of known methods of food preservation come July, August and September, when surplus vegetables from Victory gardens start rolling into northern Illinois kitchens.

The poster shown above is another in the series calling the attention of school children to the parallel between safe habits practiced by the armed forces and those which should be practiced by the children. The March "Victory Hero" poster is being distributed to more than 38,000 classrooms in the Illinois and Indiana territory of the Chicago Motor Club. The motor club directs many appeals for safe pedestrian practices to children of school age because the children not only are more careful themselves but are likely to carry the safety lessons home to other members of the family.
